Frequently Asked Questions about Super Contractor Trucks

What is a Super Contractor Truck?

The Super Contractor Truck is a commercial duty work truck designed and built for contractors. The Super Contractor combines a rugged dump truck with roomy, walk-in tool storage in one compact truck. It's like getting two trucks in one. The Super Contractor truck combines a box truck and a dump truck in one easy-to-drive truck. Transport contracting crews, construction tools and job supplies without having to tow a trailer.

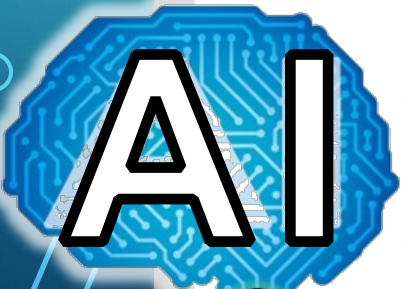

Most Super Contractor Trucks are built on an Isuzu N series single cab or crew cab truck chassis.

The aluminum body option for the Super Contractor Truck offers several advantages. First, it weighs much less than a steel body, allowing for additional cargo capacity. In some cases, you may be able to select a truck chassis with the aluminum body that can hold more payload compared to a steel body. Additionally, the aluminum body provides tremendous corrosion protection, which is especially beneficial for contractors in landscaping, hardscaping, or masonry trades. The aluminum body is generally more expensive than the all-steel body, but it can reduce the overall weight of the truck by approximately 1000 pounds, allowing for more cargo capacity.

how much can the dump body hold

Neal

The dump body of the Super Contractor Truck equipped with the aluminum and composite dump body and 4-ton hoist can hold approximately 8,000 pounds. However, the actual capacity may vary depending on how the cargo is loaded. Loading cargo to the front area of the dump body will lower the dumping capacity, while loading cargo to the rear of the dump body may increase the capacity.
